Introduction

The Tucker Foundation Project was funded by Brian Tucker, a white South African who currently lives in Australia. The project was compiled by the University of the Witwatersrand School of Journalism. Brian Tucker wanted the contributions of white South Africans who fought against apartheid to be documented. The aim of the project was to concentrate on the experiences of ordinary white South Africans fighting in an extra-ordinary period. As a result, between thirty and forty oral histories were collected.

Notes

To date sixteen recordings are available to the public.
