

A3391f Francis Thackeray, publications, 2001-2015

Journal articles published by Professor Francis Thackeray, Anthropologist at the Evolutionary Studies Institute, University of the Witwatersrand.
The articles relate to the chemical analysis of clay tobacco pipes, including that of William Shakespeare, which indicate the smoking of Cannabis in Shakespeare's time.

Included is an email by Professor Thackeray, explaining the reason for the deposit of this collection at Historical Papers.

- 1 Chemical analysis of residues from seventeenth-century clay pipes from Stratford-upon-Avon and environs
Authors J.F. Thackeray, N.J. van der Merwe and T.A. van der Merwe. Published in South African Journal of Science, January/February 2001
- 2 Shakespeare, plants, and chemical analysis of early 17th century clay 'tobacco' pipes from Europe
Author F. Thackeray. Published as Scientific Correspondence in South African Journal of Science, July/August 2015
- 3 Shakespeare's cryptic word-play, with special reference to 'compounds' (drugs), 'weed' and 'invention' (creative writing)
Author F. Thackeray. Unpublished, see email.