1. If we take to ourselves the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost part of the sea, duty performed or duty violated is still with us, for our happiness or our misery.

If we say the darkness shall cover us, in the darkness as in the light, our obligations are still with us.

2. If the true spark of religious and civil liberty be kindled, it will burn. Human agency cannot extinguish it. Like the earth's central fire, it may be smothered for a time. The ocean may overwhelm it, mountains may press it down. But its inherent and unconquerable force will have both the ocean and the land, and at sometime or other, in some place or other, the volcano will break out and flame to heaven.

3. If we work upon marble, it will perish. If we work upon brass, time will efface it. If we rear temples, they will crumble to dust. But if we work upon men's immortal minds, if we imbue them with high principles, with the just fear of God and love of their fellow-men, we engrave on those tablets something which no time can efface, and which will brighten and brighten to all eternity.

4. If it be the pleasure of heaven that my country shall require the poor offering of my life, the victim shall be ready at the appointed hour of sacrifice, come what that hour may.
